Practice Profile

Laura has a busy and varied civil practice, with particular emphasis on personal injury and professional negligence claims, inquiries, and professional discipline.

Laura is regularly instructed in fatal and catastrophic cases, and in actions that have as their subject matter deaths in state custody, employers' liability, harassment, industrial disease, sexual abuse and suicide.

Laura was appointed as Lead Junior Counsel to the Sheku Bayoh Inquiry in 2020, and as Senior Counsel to the Inquiry following her appointment as King's Counsel in 2024. The Inquiry was set up to establish the circumstances of Mr Bayoh's death following restraint by the police; and to examine the post-incident management process and investigations that followed; and to determine whether Mr Bayoh's race was a relevant factor.

Laura was a Standing Junior Counsel to the Scottish Government between 2017 and 2024.

Laura has represented clients at fitness to practice panels (NMC; ARB) and is a legally qualified chair of the fitness to practice committee of the SSSC.

From 2009-2012, Laura held the office of Advocate Depute. In this role, she prosecuted (as Lead Counsel) many high-profile, difficult and anxious cases before the High Court of Justiciary. These included murder, culpable homicide, armed robbery, causing death by dangerous driving, rape, and the sexual abuse of children.

Laura's appointment as an Advocate Depute followed a long and successful career in the Crown Office, during which time she held a number of specialised legal posts, including the investigation of sudden, suspicious and unexpected deaths and the conduct of Fatal Accident Inquiries; precognosing and indicting cases for trial in the High Court; and international co-operation in the investigation and prosecution of crime.

Laura's criminal experience informs her approach to her civil work, and she brings to her practice considerable advocacy experience, sound judgement, and a meticulous approach to case preparation. In both the civil and criminal courts, Laura has extensive experience of preparing and presenting cases which are both factually and legally complex, and in which expert evidence has been led.

Alongside her civil practice, Laura maintains an interest in criminal law. She takes the evidence of vulnerable witnesses on Commission in advance of trial, on behalf of the Crown. As defence counsel, she has been instructed in murder and rape cases, and as Lead Counsel for one of 5 accused in a 14 week High Court trial arising out of allegations of historical sexual and physical abuse in a residential home for vulnerable children run by the Christian Brothers.

Laura has a particular interest in cases at the interface between the criminal and civil law: she was instructed as Junior Counsel to represent a professional footballer in a civil action of damages for rape, both at proof in the Court of Session and in the subsequent reclaiming motion, and has been instructed to pursue civil actions for damages in a number of historical sexual abuse cases since the coming into force of the Limitation (Childhood Abuse)(Scotland) Act 2017.

Publications & Seminars

Laura collaborated with a crime writer, forensic scientist, pathologist and professional colleagues to stage a reconstruction of a 1930s murder trial at the Bloody Scotland crime writing festival (2019). All performances sold out and the production received high acclaim, with articles in several newspapers. The production was filmed by the Modern Studies Association, to be used as part of the school curriculum throughout Scotland. The film was shown as the closing event at the Bloody Scotland 2020 (online) Festival and was followed by a panel discussion, which Laura chaired. She had previously chaired an event at Bloody Scotland in 2017, in which she debated the need for accuracy in the way in which courtroom scenes are portrayed in works of fiction with 3 lawyers-turned-crime-writers.

Laura has written about her passion for legal education in both the Herald and the Scotsman. She provides occasional advice to crime writers and television script writers on criminal law, evidence and procedure. She is an advocacy trainer and mentor.

During the course of her career, Laura has developed an interest in, and commitment to, helping vulnerable witnesses give their best evidence. She has given a number of presentations on this topic (including a talk on special measures for vulnerable witnesses at a Law Society conference, and a talk to members of the French Judiciary in Paris, organised by the Judicial Studies Committee). She contributed to the Faculty response to the draft Vulnerable Witnesses Bill.

During her time in Crown Office, Laura spoke at numerous seminars on a range of topics, and was interviewed by the BBC for a radio broadcast on the role of the Fiscal in the investigation of sudden deaths. She contributed to the training of A&E doctors on the same subject

Laura served on an Advisory Group to the Scottish Law Commission during the preparation of its Discussion Paper on Damages for Personal Injury (2022).
